

Given the massive consolidation of Radio that has been a result of similar 'opening' of the broadcast ownership rules for radio, is it not likely that the same will happen in other broadcast media?

I have no illusions that this comment will make any difference, but please think this through. Monopoly is NOT in the public interest, neither economic monopoly nor monopoly of viewpoints. Putting these rules into place will achieve both.

Please attempt to place the public interest ahead of the corporate interest. It is the diversity of views that has made this nation what it is, that allows our intellectual and cultural capital to grow and to hold the worldwide influence it has. Please don't throw that away by creating a corporate monoculture.
